Miss Derwent's Diamond.

"No, mother, let me go, it's too bad for Lizzie, it is indeed!"

Mrs. Graham looked up from the velvet robe he was trimming, with an anxious expression on her wan and faded face.

"'Tis bad, I know," she replied, shuddering slightly, as she heard the sleet tinkling against the window. "But I thought Miss Derwent might pay Lizzie and you know, Tom, we must have the money to-night; and besides, child, how could you even go out on the ice?"

The boy looked down at his deformed feet, and tears rushed to his eyes.

"Oh, mother!" he sobbed, but Lizzie's kisses silenced him.

"There, you dear, brave little brother," she said, kissing him again and again, "don't fret about me, I can run up there ever so soon; but it pleases me to see you so careful of me. I will take the will for the deed this time, Tom, darling."

She put on her shawl and her scarlet hood—a simple, woolen thing, that she had knit at odd moments, yet how its vivid hues brought out her creamy, clear-cut face. A sweet face it was, full of truth, and trust and tenderness. Little Tom watched her with fond pride.

"Oh, sis," he said, "you are so beautiful—a thousand times handsomer than any of the fine ladies I see on the street. You remind me of the princess my book tells about."

Lizzie laughed gaily.

"Poor little Tom!" she said, patting his cheek. "Well, I'm glad some one admires me. But let me have the dress, mother—how handsome it is. Won't Miss Derwent glitter to-night?"

Mrs. Graham finished and folded the robe; wine colored velvet it was, radiant with bugles and laces.

"Don't jumble it, Lizzie," she said, "or Miss Derwent will be sure to find fault—we must have some cold and a little tea, Lizzie, and you might get a sausage too—mm."

"Yes, mother, and I'll be back as soon as I can. Good bye."

She took the bundle in her arms and tripped lightly down the creaking stairs. Tom went to the window and looked down to see her cross the street.

"Poor sis!" he sighed, "she has to work so hard, and she's so good and beautiful. I'll tell you, mother, what I read in my book about fine gentlemen coming to help poor people like us. Will some grand prince come and marry Lizzie, by-and-by?"

"I'm afraid not, Tom," she replied, "such things rarely happen in reality."

But while she spoke a faint smile glimmered over her faded face, the last hope of her waning life was entered in Lizzie's future.

"Yes, they do, mother," Tom maintained stoutly, "my book doesn't tell stories. Lizzie will find her prince by-and-by."

In the meantime Lizzie made her way over the icy pavements in the direction of the Derwent mansion. The wind and sleet beat her back and almost took away her breath, but she hurried on bravely, her cheeks all aglow and her fingers tingling with the cold. When she reached the granite steps, she found the lofty mansion in a blaze of splendor. Mrs. Derwent gave a grand party that night, and her dear five hundred friends were invited.

"Give me the bundle and let me run up; my young lady is in a fine passion because you've kept her waiting so long. She ought to have been dressed an hour ago. Why didn't you come sooner?" said the maid, as she let her come in.

"I came the moment the dress was finished, say so to Miss Derwent, and ask her to send me the pay for making."

The girl laughed.

"I dare not, indeed," she said. "I should lose my place if I carried such a message to Miss Derwent. She's very much excited now. You'll have to call another time."

"That won't do. I must have the money to-night."

"Then you must come up and ask for it."

"I will."

And, as good as her word, she followed, passed the grand reception rooms, up the broad stairway, to the very door of the young heiress's dressing-room. A young man buttoned to the throat in a heavy overcoat, who had been an unobserved listener to this little conversation between Lizzie and the maid, followed also, his keen grey eyes flashing with amused interest.

Miss Derwent sat in the center of her chamber, wrapped in an elegant cashmere gown, her magnificent hair, and the coronet of jewels on her brow, giving her the air and mien of an empress. But her handsome face was distorted by impatient anger.

"Hasn't the dress come yet, Lucille?" she cried, as the girl entered. "You'll have to send for it, and apologize to the company, for I will not be disappointed."

"You shall not, my lady, here it is."

She snatched the package eagerly and commenced to tear off the wrapping.

"To think that I must be kept waiting in this manner," she continued. "I won't put up with it—they shan't have another stitch of my work."

"My mother finished the dress as soon as she could," Lizzie said advancing to the door of the drawing room. "You only sent it on Wednesday; my mother had to work day and night to get it done as soon as she did—and she is sick too."

"I can't help that; I am not to be kept waiting. Here, assist me now—doesn't the dress look superbly? I told mamma how it would make up. What shall I wear? Let me see—the Valenciennes collar and the diamond—where is it?"

The maid raised the lid of a mother of pearl casket that stood upon the dressing case, disclosing a brooch of rare device, set with a single diamond of such magnificent size and splendor that the whole room seemed ablaze with splendor of the reflections. Miss Derwent's fine eyes flashed with triumph and gratification.

"That's it, Lucille, nothing could be more elegant than that splendid solitaire. Come, now, dress me quickly."

The girl stepped forward to shut the door, but Lizzie put her aside.

"Miss Derwent," she said, "one moment, if you please; let me have the money you owe my mother. I would not ask for it if we were not in such urgent need."

Miss Derwent made an impatient gesture.—"Lucille, will you close the door and dress me, or am I to be kept waiting all night? I will send the money to-morrow; don't trouble me now."

Lizzie pressed in as she made her appeal, and stood beside the dressing case, her hand resting upon the casket that contained the jewel. Its lustre caught her attention, and, looking down upon it, a swift thought shot through her mind. Was it just that Isabel Derwent should have so much and she so little? What untold joy and comfort the value of that one bauble would bring to her mother and little Tom! But then came the old command, which had been taught her at the Sabbath school, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods," and she put the thought from her mind. Miss Derwent turned upon her red with anger.

"Didn't I tell you not to trouble me to-night? I'm too late now. Put her out, Lucille, and dress me at once, or I will discharge you this instant."

Lucille caught up the velvet robe, and Lizzie turned away in despair. Descending the stairs the wearer of the heavy overcoat confronted her.

"Excuse me—but may I ask if Miss Derwent paid you?" he said abruptly.

Lizzie's eyes were dim with tears of disappointment; but she flashed an amused glance at this fellow's bearded face, and then answered candidly:

"No, sir, she did not."

He stood silent a moment, still barring her way, and then he drew out his pocket-book, which, like his overcoat, was very heavy.

"Little girl," he said, hesitatingly, "will you let me pay your bill?"

But Lizzie shot by him like an arrow—her heart was too proud to accept his offer. He looked after her, and she disappeared down the long hall, with a half sigh.

"Poor little thing!" he murmured; and what a face she has—it reminds me of Raphael's Madonna. And Belle Derwent, with her many thousands, could not find a few pennies to pay her. I'll not forget that."

Lizzie ran until she reached the street, and felt the sharp sting of the ice against her feet. Then she thought of her mother and little Tom. How could she go back to them with nothing? She stopped, looking back at the blazing windows, and half regretting that she did not accept of the gentleman's kindness. What would become of them all that dreary night without food or fuel and poor Tom so hungry for his sausage? She stood quite still for a moment or two in deep thought, then she crossed over to a lamp, and drawing a slender gold chain from her bosom, examined it closely. Years before, when she was a wee girl, with violet eyes and glossy curls, her father gave it to her as a birthday gift, and the tiny locket suspended from it, contained his miniature. He was dead, and it was very hard to part with this precious memento—the very thought of it made her sob outright. But she could not let her sick mother sit in that chill room all night without the cup of tea she had craved all day. And a poor little face seemed to rise up before her eyes. It was the only treasure she possessed on earth—but it must go. She removed it from her neck and started off at a rapid pace, clutching it in her hand. She would sell it, but her mother and Tom should never know, and by and by, may be, she might raise money enough to redeem it.

She paused, flushed and breathless, at the door of a fashionable jewelry store. The windows were radiant with precious gems, and everything looked so bright and wonderful that the poor girl was half afraid to go in. She leaned against the windows, striving to recover her courage, when a heavy hand was laid on her arm.

"Not so fast, my pretty bird!" said a gruff voice, "you must come with me."

Lizzie turned in indignant surprise, and made an effort to shake off his grasp, but he held her.

"I arrest you, Lizzie Graham," he said, "in the name of the law."

"Arrest me! and for what, pray?"

"For stealing Miss Derwent's diamond."

The trial at the magistrate's office was brief—the evidence conclusive. Of course the girl was found guilty. Did not Miss Derwent herself observe her standing by the dressing case, with her hand upon the casket that contained the jewel? and five minutes after the diamond was gone. And, to crown the evidence, the officers sent in pursuit of her found her lurking around a jewelry store, waiting to sell the diamond of course. There was no mistake about the matter. So Lizzie Graham was committed to the county prison to await further trial. A considerable crowd followed her, though the storm was so severe, and as the grated door was about to shut her in, looking from one face to another with a vain hope of help, she recognized the young man who had proffered her a kindness before. She made a gesture and he was at her side in an instant.

"Stop," he commanded, "let her speak to me."

And the Warden obeyed, for Dick Renshawe was the first man in the city.

"Poor mother and little Tom," she said, her lips quivering. "If you could only send them word—they will be so uneasy."

"I will. Where do they live?"

She named the street. Then he stooped, and laid his hand on her head.

"Little girl, what can I do for you? You are not guilty of this charge."

Her tearful eyes brightened.

"Don't trouble about that, sir," she said quietly. "God will clear me."

Through all the weary day that intervened before the trial, Dick Renshawe worked and waited. Never was a man's soul so full of his work. Day and night the girl's white face and dove eyes were before him. He engaged the most eminent counsel for the case, but every one told him it was useless. Of course the girl would be found guilty—was the assurance of all.

On the day of the trial, he went to see Miss Derwent herself. She came down readily enough, but with a look of resentment in her fine eyes, for Mr. Renshawe was an old admirer of hers, and he had been rather neglectful of late. But unconscious or careless of this, the young man plunged into business at once.

"Miss Derwent, Lizzie Graham will be convicted to-morrow," he said.

Miss Derwent raised her brows in well bred surprise.

"So I suppose, Mr. Renshawe."

"You believe her guilty?"

"I do."

He rose to depart.

"And you intend to send her to the State prison?"

"The law will send her."

"Good morning, Miss Derwent."

"Good morning, Mr. Renshawe."

And they had been almost lovers. Dick went to consult with his counsel, and Miss Derwent, to cut to the quick, despatched a message to the Count Gordess to attend her to the opera that night. At a late hour Renshawe dropped in, hoping that the music might soothe his excited nerves. His interest in the impending trial amounted to madness. He chanced into a box just opposite Miss Derwent's. She was looking best as she always did when she wore the wine-colored velvet; and when she arose to depart, the young man, more from habit than anything else, raised his glass to inspect her. A stream of light almost blinding him, a glowing star, as it were, in the folds of her sweeping train. The next instant he was at her side, disengaging the glittering diamond from its hiding place.

"Look here, Miss Derwent," he cried, holding it before her astonished eyes, "see your diamond; and you have carried it in your robe all the time, while the poor child has been lying in prison. Oh! shame! shame!"

"Mr. Renshaw, I am sorry," she began; but he was gone before she could finish her sentence.

Lizzie Graham, sitting all alone in her gloomy cell, reading her Bible by the light of a prison lamp, heard the heavy door swing open and swift steps swing down the corridor. She looked up in wondering alarm. Dick Renshawe stood before her, his bearded face as happy and tremulous as a woman's.

"Little girl," he said, "I offered to do you a kindness once, and you refused to accept it. I come to give you your freedom now—you are clear. Miss Derwent has found her diamond; it was stuck in the velvet robe she wore that night."

"I knew that God would clear me," she whispered softly.

Three months later, when the skies were blue and the fields green, and all the hedges white and sweet with hawthorn bloom, Lizzie and her mother and little Tom, were all down at a little seaside cottage—not a fashionable resort, but a quiet, happy little place that Mr. Renshaw had selected for its rural beauty. Mrs. Graham's health was failing, and Tom needed country air, he said. So they all went down there. Lizzie had been out all the afternoon, gathering strawberries, and all came home at sunset, her lips and fingers died rosy-red, and her eyes bright with joy. Dick met her out on the lawn, with his fishing tackle across his shoulders. He threw it down and took the basket from her arm. They had walked on silently for a moment or two, then he came to a sudden halt.

"Lizzie," he began abruptly, his voice broken and tremulous, "I might as well speak now as at any time. I've been all over the world, and know scores of fine women, but I never knew what love was till I saw your face. Will you be my wife, Lizzie?" Lizzie looked upon the summer heavens, where the stars were coming out, and breathed her answer like a prayer.

"I will, Mr. Renshawe."

That night she told her mother, and the widow's wan wan face seemed to regain a measure of its lost youth; and little Tom, listening, and comprehending, clapped his hands with delight.

"Didn't I tell you so, mother?" he said, "didn't I tell you that Lizzie's Prince would turn up by and by?"

Tom Ward brothers have sent a challenge to any four oarsmen of England to row five or six miles for $5,000 a side in rubber country.

The first mortgage bonds of the Pacific Railroad of Missouri, offered yesterday, were all taken at an early hour. The price has been raised to 97½ and large lots were taken at the advance.

Patrolman James Hill, whom at imminent peril of life pursued and captured the murderer of Patrolman Swedick, has been promoted by the Police Commissioners.

A case of highway robbery occurred in Hackensack Wednesday.

At Princeton, N. J., Tuesday, a carriage containing Rev. Alfred Baker and wife, Rev. Lewis Baker and Rev. Dr. Stubbs was participated down a steep embankment, and Lewis Baker had an arm fractured and the party were all more or less injured.

The Ariel, of the New York and Bremen Steamship Line, arrived yesterday at quarantine with 863 passengers from Bremen on the 11th ult. A few days ago the small pox made its appearance in a mild form in the steerage. Those who are ill from the disease will be removed to the hospital, the slight cases vaccinated, and after the vessel has been fumigated she will be permitted to come up to the city and discharge.

The alarming increase of mortality in the city is drawing special attention to the sanitary condition of this metropolis, and inquires into the causes which produce such fatal effects. Much of the increase in the death rates is directly traceable to two causes—defective drainage and sewerage, and a deficiency of the supply of water for family purposes.

Last night Frank and Nicholas Fisher, brothers, quarreled in a lager beer saloon at No. 124, Cheap Side street, when Frank drew a revolver and fired one shot at Nicholas. The ball glanced off the side of his head and inflicted no injury. The assaulting party was arrested and locked up.

The master masons held another meeting yesterday and appeared more determined than ever not to yield to the demand of the strikers. It was stated that over 40 master masons are employing ten hour men while not more than eight or ten are working eight hour men.

A general agricultural report of the condition of our harvest on the continent says the harvest in south of France is terminated. Fears which had generally prevailed has been dispelled and resulted better than was expected. The crop, which in certain localities of the Var was supposed to be in great jeopard will be abundant. At Angires reaping is going on everywhere and farmers seem to be well satisfied. The crop will be large, although the quality leaves something to be desired. At Montlbery the sickle is also in the corn, and the crop will be good. Letters from Normandy give them greater hope, and on several points the product will be above the average. Similar accounts are received from the east of France. In Hungary the harvest is advancing rapidly.

BOSTON PETROLEUM MARKET.

Reported Expressly for the Morning Herald.

BOSTON, August 1.

PETROLEUM—The market continues quiet, and the transactions during the past week have been light. Western brands are scarce, and Boston Refiners are supplying the market. Western brands if in good order and color will sell one cent below Boston brands, with the packages charged at $1.50 cash. Downer's Orsulat and other brands sell at 34@35c delivered. Benzine 71 gr. 21c; 60 gr. 23c; 300 bbls. 28 gr. Lubricating Naves of 45c. Crude 45 gr 17½c in bulk.

The stock of Crude and Refined in Boston is exceeding small, and Boston Refiners are highly situated at the west in most cases. There will be a good demand for the article soon at such rates, that it will be so freely used.

Freights from New York to Boston 75c; Philadelphia 50c; Cleveland, $2.50 per bbl. Empty Refined barrels, $1.35 at store.

700 MILES OF THE

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD

Are now finished and in operation. Sixty miles of track have been laid this spring, and the work along the whole line between the Atlantic and Pacific States is being pushed forward more rapidly than ever before. More than twenty thousand men are employed, and it is not impossible that the centre track, from Omaha to Sacramento will be finished by 1869 instead of 1870. The means provided are ample, and all that energy, men and money can do to secure the completion of this at the earliest possible day, will be done.

The UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY receive

I.—A GOVERNMENT GRANT of the right of way, and all necessary timber and other materials found along the line of its operations.

II.—A GOVERNMENT GRANT of 12,000 acres of land to the mile, taken in alternate sections on each side of its road. This is an absolute donation, and will be a source of large revenue in the future.

III.—A GOVERNMENT GRANT of United States Thirty-year Bonds, amounting to from $16,000 to $48,000 per mile, according to the difficulties to be surmounted on the various sections to be built. The Government takes a second mortgage as security, and it is expected that not only the interest, but the principal amount may be paid in services rendered by the Company in transporting troops, mails, &c. The interest is now much more than paid in this way, besides securing a great saving in time and money to the Government.

IV.—A GOVERNMENT GRANT of the right to issue its own First Mortgage Bonds, to aid in building the road to the same amount as the United States Bonds issued for the same purpose, and no more. THE GOVERNMENT PERMITS the Trustees of the First Mortgage Bondholders to deliver the Bonds to the Company only as the road is Completed, and after it has been examined by United States Commissioners and pronounced to be in all respects a first-class Railroad, laid with a heavy Track, and completely supplied with depots, stations, turnouts, car-shops, locomotives, cars, &c.

V.—A CAPITAL STOCK SUBSCRIPTION from the stockholders, of which over Eight Millions have been paid in upon the work already done, and which will be increased as the wants of the Company require.

VI.—NET CASH EARNINGS on its Way Business, that already amount to MORE THAN THE INTEREST on the First Mortgage Bonds. These earnings are no indication of the vast through traffic that must follow the opening of the road to the Pacific, but they certainly prove that upon such property, resting nearly three to one in their amount

First Mortgage Bonds

ARE SECURE BEYOND ANY CONTINGENCY

The Union Pacific Bonds run thirty years, are for $1,000 each, and have coupons attached. They bear annual interest, payable on the first days of January and July at the Company's office in the City of New York, at the rate of six per cent. in gold. The principal is payable in gold at maturity. The price is $102, and at the present rate of gold, they pay a liberal income on their cost.

The Company believe that these Bonds, at the present rate, are the cheapest security in the market, and reserve the right to advance the price at any time.

Subscriptions will be received in Titusville by

G. C. HYDE, Cashier Second National Bank,
C. C. DUFFIELD, Cashier Titusville Savings Bank,
STOWELL & CO. Bankers, Rouseville, Pa.,

and in New York

At the Company's Office, No. 20 Nassau St., AND BY

John J. Cisco & Son, Bankers, No. 59 Wall Street,

And by the Company's advertised agents throughout the United States.

Remittances should be made in drafts or other funds par in New York, and the Bonds will be sent free of charge by return express. Parties subscribing through local agents will look to them for their safe delivery.

A PAMPHLET AND MAP FOR 1868 has just been published by the Company, giving fuller information than is possible in an advertisement, respecting the Progress of the Work, the Resources of the Country traversed by the Road, the Means for Construction, and the Value of the Bonds, which will be sent free on application at the Company's offices or to any of the advertised agents.

AN ORDINANCE REGULATING THE construction of Sidewalks.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Common Council of the City of Titusville, That all Sidewalks laid on any of the public streets shall hereafter be made of good sound pine plank not less than one and one-half inches in thickness. That said plank shall be laid on stringers of good sound oak or chestnut not less than three by four inches in size and laid not over four feet apart; the plank to be well spiked with spikes not less than four inches in length and not more than six inches apart.

Section 2. All Sidewalks laid hereafter shall be seven feet and six inches wide exclusive of curb stone on Spring, Main, Franklin and Perry streets, and on other streets of such width as the Street Committee shall think necessary, and all walks to be laid on the grade furnished by the Street Committee.

Section 3. On any failure to comply with the provisions of this Ordinance, the Street Commissioner will have power to forthwith remove such walk and to build such a walk as will fulfill requirements of this Ordinance under the provisions of an ordinance passed the 29th day of August, 1861, relating to sidewalks and all the provisions of said ordinance in respect to compelling owners of lots to build sidewalks and for the collection of all expenses for work and material on sidewalks, are hereby extended to this ordinance.

Section 4. That nothing in this Ordinance to interfere with persons building walks of stone, brick or any material that the Street Committee may think proper.

Section 5. All ordinances or parts of ordinances now in force conflicting with this Ordinance, are hereby repealed.

Passed July 23d, 1868. J. J. McGRUM, President of Council.

Approved July 23d, 1868. HENRY RINELY, Mayor.

I certify that the foregoing Ordinance was unanimously adopted by the Common Council July 23d, 1868, and approved by the Mayor July 23d, 1868.

GO WITH THE CROWD

We beg to call the attention of our numerous friends and customers to the fact that we are now receiving a new and well selected stock of STAPLE and FANCY DRY GOODS, which we

POSITIVELY

Have bought during the depression in prices, and we are now offering our stock of DOMESTICS, consisting of Colored and Brown MUSLINS, PRINTS, DELANES, GINGHAMS, TICKING, STRIPES CHECKS and DENIMS, at such rates, that all who favor us with their trade, assure their friends and neighbors that we are actually

GIVING

Away good and desirable Goods lower than any other house in the Oil Region. Our stock of DRESS GOODS is well adapted for the Spring and Summer season and consists of all the novelties, such as GRANITE CHENE and CHANGEABLE POPLINS, POIL DE CHEVRE, LUSTERS, BLACK and CORDED ALAPACAS, LAWNS, ORGANDIES, REGUES, MARSEILLES and LINENS. In fact, what you cannot find with us, it is useless to go

AWAY

To other stores to look for, as we have paid close attention to our stock of WHITE GOODS, and can offer a full line of NAINSOOK, JACONET, STRIPED and CROSS-BARRED MUSLINS, PLAIN and DOTTED MULL VICTORIA and BISHOP LAWNS, TARLETON LAWN, LINEN, hemstitched and embroidered HANDKERCHIEFS, EDGINGS, RUFFLINGS, TAPE and TAPE TRIMMINGS, CROCHET and other BRAIDS.

OUR

Assortment of HOSIERY and NOTIONS is too numerous to qualify, and only call your attention to our celebrated line of ALEXANDER KID GLOVES, every pair of which we warrant and guarantee to every one purchasing the same, a new pair free of charge if torn or ripped in trying on.

In our CLOTH DEPARTMENT will be found every thing

NEW

And desirable in FANCY SILK MIXED and HARRISS CASSIMERES, Black and Colored BROADCLOTHS and TWEEDS, COTTONADES and JEANS, which we not only offer by the yard, but under the careful supervision of R. J. RIBBEL, will made to order in the best of style.

Last, but not least, we have greatly enlarged our stock of ready-made

GOODS

For Men and Boys wear, to which for quality, style and price we challenge comparison.

THE

American Cooking Stove

IN COURT.

At an adjourned term of the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Northern District of New York, in the second circuit held at the City Hall, in the city of Albany, the 28th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1868.

PRESENT

The Honorable NATHAN K HALL, Judge.

JACOB H. SHEAR & JOSEPH PACKARD, vs GEORGE B. BULL & JOHN M. ROCKWELL. } In Equity.

It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed, that a perpetual injunction be issued in this suit against the defendants, restraining them from further infringements of said Patent No. 51,406, dated Dec 5th, 1865, for improvements in cooking stoves, pursuant to and in accordance with the prayer of the Bill of Complaint.

(Signed) A. A. Burns, Clerk.

The above suit was instituted for infringement of the Patent securing the manner of fitting the ash pan in the hearth of the American Cooking Stove, and for the combination of the bailed ash pan. We have repeatedly cautioned the public against selling or using stoves with these improvements not manufactured by us. All persons now selling or using stoves with these improvements in violation of the above injunction, without license from us, will be liable to fine and imprisonment.

Heretofore we have in our circulars, alluded to a series of experiments being made with Nitro Glycerine and other explosives. We now announce that we have succeeded, even beyond our most sanguine expectations as regards the safety of handling, also the unprecedented force and power manifested by a skillful combination which has the size of the torpedo so greatly reduced that it may be well known to read in addition here

$8 [illegible] 15-inch [illegible] powder..... 25
Combination equal to 20 [illegible] 150
Improved combination equal to 150 lbs powder..... 400
Double combination, equal to 300 to 1000 lbs powder..... $200 to 500

CAUTION—The public are cautioned against employing any but the regularly authorized agents of this Company or the patent, as the courts have, by decision of the Commissioner of Patents for the United States, covered the use of the Torpedo and all explosive materials for oil wells, and holders of such materials by other parties incur great liability for infringement of their rights, and we shall hold land or working interests to a strict accountability for such infringements.

WORKING BARRELS

with

Innis' Improved Socket Joints

ARE NOW OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

Parties using these rods will be exempt from the usual series of accidents attendant upon the use of the ordinary winged joints with rivets

Each end of the rod is dovetailed into a socket with a wedge, the socket also serving for a box, and connection made by a detached double pin.

The joint is lighter and stronger than the winged joint, straightening, stiffening, and strengthening the whole line of Rods.

The working is perfect, giving complete satisfaction. Rods warranted not to part at coupling.

To be had of Hardware dealers throughout the Oil Regions, or of the Manufacturer.

WM. J. INNIS, Pioneer.

Price 16 cents per foot.
